Artwork on an Envelope

Athumani Omari Mwariko Created a Treasure on Paper

Moshi to New York: A solo use of the TZS 2/50 definitive issue, released 9 December 1965, paid the air mail rate from Tanzania to the United States. The real draw of this cover, though, is the pen and ink drawing by the sender, Athumani Omari Mwariko, an artist and carver who gained an international following for his work.

by David Frye, Editor

As my search for uses of the definitive issues from post-Independence Tanganyika/Tanzania continues, I've been drawn, recently, to look for on-cover uses of Tanzania's series released on 9 December 1965, the fourth anniversary of the country's independence from Great Britain. That search explains the air mail cover with the TZS 2/50 issue, sent from Moshi, Tanzania, to New York, N.Y., on 20 November 1966—a nice, in-period, solo use paying the air mail rate to North America.

The more remarkable part of the cover is the pen and ink drawing, signed by the sender, artist Athumani Omari Mwariko. After my search for the stamp led me to find the cover online, the artwork drew my attention. I discovered that Omari Mwariko had a long and noted career as a carver. His Wrestler shows his powerful and evocative work in wood.

See Mwariko's Art, p. 3

Wrestler: A 12" wood carving, undated, by Omari Mwariko, displays characteristics of the artist's approach to figures that find their echoes in the cachet sketch.

LINPEX '16 Show Cancel Attracts Cachet Designer

Lincoln Memorial, Quotation, and Prexie Stamp Appear on Cover

In May, the Club received an e-mail from Joshua McGee, a cachet designer and owner of collectpostmarks.com. He wanted to pass on his thanks to the Club for the cancel we provided at our show and to share with us how he worked that cancel into a cover that tied the city's name to its namesake. He gave us permission to share the cover design in our newsletter. We easily grow accustomed to seeing our cancel tied to our own Club's cachet design, so having the chance to see how someone else makes use of it is definitely a treat.

Mwariko's Cover Sketch Shares His Art's Essence

One study of modern African art notes, "Another carver, Athumani Omari Mwariko, after an apprenticeship to Elimo Njau, opened his own art gallery, Mwariko's Art Gallery, in 1967 in Moshi, Tanzania. There he showed his own works. When the gallery suffered a fire, he restored it to house a variety of artifacts. Born in 1944, in Handeni, Tanzania, he studied at Makerere University College School of Fine Arts. He later attended Haystack Mountain School in Maine. He has exhibited in London, Japan, the United States and East Africa, and has contributed illustrations to numerous publications.

"His carvings have the energy of quick, spontaneous drawings. As in the work of Mwaniki and Nnaggenda, the rugged strokes of the adz remain. The resulting strength is reminiscent of work by Ghana's Vincent Kofi. However, there is an important difference. Though generally smaller than Kofi's giant pieces, and in contrast to the calm strength of the latter's sculpture, Mwariko's work expresses emotion that is volatile, and the figures seem to cry out in despair.

"Suffering and despair are frequently expressed by East African artists, especially in reaction to political oppression. Athumani Mwariko, like Francis Nnaggenda and Musani Muyinga of Uganda, Kiure Msangi of Tanzania, Hezbon Owiti of Kenya, and Henry Tayali of Zambia, makes strong statements, frequently leavened with humor, about personal and communal tragedies" (Jean Kennedy, New Currents, Ancient Rivers: Contemporary African Artists in a Generation of Change, Washington, D.C.: Smithsonian Institution Press, 1992, p. 145).

Below the name he had printed as the return address on his air mail stationery, Omari Mwariko included a saying in Swahili. Translated, it roughly states, "Maintain our traditional customs and culture." Through his long creative career and active involvement in Tanzania's public life, Omari Mwariko, has carried out, in multiple ways, the mission he shared with his correspondence almost a half-century ago.

Artist and Leader: At a May 2014 meeting of the shareholders of CRDB Bank in Arusha, Omari Mwariko holds up a picture of Jakaya Kikwete, Tanzania's fourth president from 2005 to 2015.
