Stamp Travels: Asking Lots of Questions

by David M. Frye

Since February, I have focused on a new collection:
the stamps of Vatican City.
This is my first foray—beyond accumulating—into an intentional effort to assemble, study, and appreciate another country's stamps and postal history.

Working on this new collection feels like traveling to a new land. That's not a surprise. The language is different, with stamps featuring Latin and Italian and the occasional Greek. The subjects lift up church history and sacred art, rather than U.S. history and popular culture. Even the denominations—lire and
then euros—are not dollars and “forever.”

Questions wash over me in my explorations:

- How do the subjects on the stamps fit with the events in the history of Vatican City?

Views of Venice: This block of four stamps, issued in 1972, shows a map of Venice. The issue raised awareness of UNESCO's efforts to save Venice from the waters of the Mediterranean. Below, the Grand Canal and its gondolas.

- How do changes in printing technologies and press types compare with the changes in U.S. stamp production?
- What agreements motivate the selection of joint issues with other countries?
- Are the names visible along the edges of the stamp designs, when viewed under magnification, the names of designers? What are their histories? Do their bodies of work exhibit identifiable styles?
- How many non-philatelic uses on cover are “out there” waiting for me to find?
- What will I learn from joining the Vatican Philatelic Society?

Here's a question for you: What new places can you visit in your collecting journey?

World's Greatest Philatelic Research In One Place Online: www.globalphilateliclibrary.org

National Postal Museum Announces Launch of Centralized Gateway

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 1, 2012—The Smithsonian's National Postal Museum announces the launch of the Global Philatelic Library Web site, a centralized information gateway to the world's greatest philatelic research. Founding partners include the National Postal Museum and Smithsonian Libraries in Washington, D.C., the Royal Philatelic Society London, and the American Philatelic Research Library in Bellefonte, Pa.

On Feb. 15, 1888, American Philatelic Association President John K. Tiffany wrote to Edward Denny Bacon, secretary of the then Philatelic Society London, regarding a joint indexing project. He said, "... I consider the project as utterly impossible of any practical execution ..." One hundred and twenty-four years later the project has become a reality. This ambitious project has become a present-day reality thanks to the inspiration and dedication of the founding partners. The Web site establishes a single destination—a responsive centralized gateway—by which philatelists around the world can search, locate, and access philatelic research from partner libraries in real time, from any computer. Searchable listings of books and publications, as well as resource locations and access, are now just a click away, providing invaluable resources to those doing philatelic research:

- A world-class collection of printed, electronic and other media;
- Access and support for beginners, hobbyists, specialists, writers and postal historians;
- International collaboration and cooperation with philatelic libraries and museums around the world; and
- An anthology of fascinating, informative and sometimes even scandalous articles written throughout the past century about philately and some of the people involved in its history.

"A large part of the philatelic information I have acquired was discovered incidentally while searching for something else," said Thomas Lera, Winton M. Blount Research Chair at the National Postal Museum. "I hope other philatelists, scholars and researchers will push open the doors of the new global philatelic library to find the answers to their questions and uncover new ones in the process as well."

Other contributing philatelic research libraries include The Collectors Club Library in New York, Greene Foundation

(Canada), Oslo Filatelistklubb Bibliotek (Norway), Philatelistische Bibliothek Hamburg (Germany), Postal History Foundation in Tucson, Ariz., Rocky Mountain Philatelic Library in Denver, National Philatelic Society (United Kingdom) and Western Philatelic Library in Sunnyvale, Calif.

"All involved with this project should be congratulated," said Alan Holyoake, internationally known philatelist. "The introduction of a centralized gateway must be one of the most important developments ever to have taken place within the 'philatelic' world. I fully expect this centralized gateway to rapidly allow philatelists from around the world to not only enhance their knowledge but also establish relationships and friendships with others"

The National Postal Museum is devoted to presenting the colorful and engaging history of the nation's mail service and showcasing one of the largest and most comprehensive collections of stamps and philatelic material in the world. It is located at 2 Massachusetts Avenue N.E., Washington, D.C., across from Union Station. The museum is open daily from 10:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. (closed Dec. 25). For more information about the Smithsonian, call (202) 633-1000 or visit the museum's Web site at www.postalmuseum.si.edu.
